TENT ERECTED OVER GRAVE.

Lightning and Thunder Delayed the Obituary of Miss Ellen Jane McKee.

PARLORS OF RESIDENCE FILLED WITH FLORAL OFFERINGS FROM FRIENDS OF ST. LOUIS WOMAN, WHO DIED IN NORTH CAROLINA.

The funeral service of Miss Ellen Jane McKee, who died last Monday morning at Asheville, N. C., was delayed for over an hour and a half as the result of the electric and rain storm yesterday afternoon.

The hour set for the service was 2 P.M., but the storm was so severe that it was impossible to commence at that time, owing to the noise and excitement attendant upon the rattling elements and the farricines of the friends and relatives of the deceased.

So far as could be learned, no stable bands or attaches were even injured in the blaze.

Twenty-five stalls in the northwest corner of the grounds were entirely destroyed. The origin of the fire is supposed to have been drifting ash from a stable bitch or from a castaway cigarette.

Broomhead, one of the most valuable colts at the Fair Grounds, and the entire Boker string, were turned loose but the horses commenced to destroy their stable.

All the Gerling string is supposed to have perished with the exception of Floral Wreath, a well-known handup horse. She sustained a cut on the side and was caught by Mrs. Gerling.

The grounds were filled for more than two hours with terrified horses, which kept charging through the premises.

Secretary Hackemaster, J. Schorr, Starter A. B. Tude and Phil Chinn added in suppressing the flames.

Fire which started in the stables at the west end of the Fair Grounds shortly after 1 o'clock this morning destroyed a row of stables in which several thoroughbred racers perished.

Awakened by the noise of the engine, the sound of the fire alarm and the shouts of the horsemen, the occupants of the clubhouse, including Secretary John Hackemaster, Starter A. B. Tude and Phil Chinn, went to the rescue of the frightened animals and their attendants, and commenced the task of turning the horses loose.

Fire from carelessly thrown ashes of a stable kitchen are supposed to have started the blaze, which was discovered by a private watchman. An alarm was turned in from Fair and Kosciusko avenues, and Company No. 81 was first on the scene. The fire was beyond the control of one company, however, and a second was immediately turned in.

FIRE HORSES LOST.

The Reverend William J. McKittrick of the First Presbyterian Church, who conducted the services and delivered a sermon of some length regarding the safety of the dead woman's character and her noble heart and mind. He dwelt upon her unselfish, unselfish mode of living, which was typical of her whole existence. In closing he remarked that no sermon was necessary, as her whole life had been a beautiful sermon.

The interment was in the Belhaven Cemetery, where a large canvas had been placed over the grave. More than forty carriages were in the line, and the drivers and occupants were greatly inconvenienced by the wind and rain.

The singing was by the choir of the First Presbyterian Church. The songs were "Lead, Kindly Light," "One Sweet Sorrow," "Jesus Thought" and "When the Day of God Comes."

The honorary pallbearers were G. T. Riddle, F. J. Langenberg, E. Love, W. K. Kent, Jacob W. E. French, D. M. Henry, Captain Henry King, J. C. Price, F. W. Nyman, H. M. Brown, the active pallbearers were Charles H. McKee, William McKee, James Tyler Simon, Tyler, Alex Hay, Frederick Ray, Edward Lansing Ray and George S. Tyler.
